Travers—Look here, those shoes you made for me squeak. Shoemaker—They always squeak at the end of thirty days, sir, if the bill isn't paid.

Judge Guffey—What passed between yourself and the complainant? O'Brian—I think, sir, half a dozen bricks and a piece of pavin' stone.

He—It goes without saying. She—What does? He—A deaf mute's conversation.

Squidding—Do you have any difficulty in meeting your bills? McSwil-gan—No, indeed; my great difficulty is in avoiding them.

Caller (to minister's wife)—Is not that your husband's voice I hear? Wife—Yes; he is in his study, practicing what he is going to preach.

Electric Bitters.

ELECTRIC BITTERS.—This remedy is becoming so well known and so popular as to need no special mention. All who have used Electric Bitters sing the same song of praise.— A sure medicine does not exist and it is guaranteed to do all that is claimed. Electric Bitters

There is one thing about my first husband I shall always respect him for, she said with a quiver in her voice. What is that? He paid all the Bride (exchanging bridal costume for traveling suit)—Did I appear nervous at all during the ceremony, Clara?

Bridesmaid (enviously)—A little at first, dear; but not any after George had said yes.

Just look at the color of the water.
Why, it's not fit to drink! said an indignant guest to the waiter at a hotel in Seguin, Tex., "Dat's whar you what's dirty."

Teacher—Why was Solomon the wisest man in the world? Boy—He had so many wives to advise him.
Teacher (a strong-minded female)— Well, that's not the answer in the book, but you may go up head.

What did you learn at Sunday school, Harry, said his mother, after his visit to that institution. Nothing.
What did the teacher talk about?
Only that they put dandelions in the lion's den, and he wouldn't eat 'em.

Little Boy—Mayn't I be a preacher when I grow up? "Of course you may, my pet, if you want to." Little Boy—Yes, I do. I s'pose I've got to go to church all my life, anyhow, and it's a good deal harder to sit still than to walk around and holler.

Mrs. Ludlow—Please say I'm not at home. By the way, Marie, are you quite sure that the water is the right temperature for baby's bath? Marie—Oh, yes; sure, I always know, ma'am.

ESCAPED HIS WHIPPING.

Not long since a certain mother in this town thought that she had occasion to whip her boy. No doubt she was conscientious in the matter, but there is little question in my mind that if justice prevailed the boy would have been the one to chastise his mother. Nevertheless we will let that point pass until another time.

"May I go up stairs a minute?" asked the little fellow as the mother who loved him produced the riding whip she kept for such offices of love. The permission was granted, and the boy left the room. Failing to come back promptly, his mother thought best to follow him and find out the cause of his delay. She stopped at his bedroom door, and through an open crack beheld her small son on his knees.

"O God," he prayed, if you ever helped a fellow, come now!"

The prayer took effect, and the culprit got off without a whipping. Now, that story may make you laugh, but it had just the opposite effect upon me. The tears sprang to my eyes at the first hearing and have laid to the lids very close ever since. Such a boy as that to be whipped like a donkey!

It is the regular thing for certain Europeans to sneer at the "packing" of juries and legislative bodies in the United States, as if the old world had never known how to be tricky in such matters, while though generally underhanded by the old world press, there is quite as much of that sort of thing going on there as here. A case is furnished by Alexander Dumas' management of the campaign for academy honors for his friend Zola, the writer of naturalistic fiction. Dumas and Zola both realize that the latter's election to the academy now or in the near future cannot be compassed, but unless Zola shall die too soon it will certainly be in time, for, thanks to Dumas' adroitness of energy, it has been rendered impossible for any one to be elected who will not vote for Zola when the right time shall arrive.

The Immigration to the United States from the Old World has greatly fallen off during the past year, and the immigrants now landing upon our shores are a vast improvement upon those who have been swamping the American labor market for the last decade. There is a marked difference, in the quality. The new comers are largely skilled mechanics and are supplied with means, and not the pauper class which has so long been finding refuge and support here at the expense of the public. To such a class as is now arriving there is a warm greetings extended, and ample room is offered for future homes and citizenship.

In the court-yard of the Artillery Barracks, Port Louis Mauritius, there is a large tortoise which was ceded to Great Britain along with the island in 1810. It has never abandoned its former haunt since then; and, as it had been there a long time before the cession, it is now believed to be over 200 years old. Nevertheless, it is hale, and, though we cannot say lively, it is still able to carry two men on its back.
This grand old crustacean stands about 2 feet high, measures 8½ feet across the carapace, and weighs 330 lbs. It is evidently the last of the gi-gantic tortoises of the Indian Ocean, which linger still in the Aldabra Islands, north-west of Madagascar.—

Once used, Dr. Pierce's Pills are always in favor. Specific for constipation, piles biliousness, and headaches.

The staple drink of our English ancestors before the introduction of tea and coffee was beer or ale. Tea was first drunk in England in 1610, and coffee was introduced there in 1652.
Chocolate preceded these drinks by a few years, but was soon displaced by them. Among the few vegetables then in use were artichokes, which were made into pies. A superstition prevailed that vegetables produced extraordinary effects. Water cress was believed to restore the bloom to young ladies' cheeks. Green ginger was good for the memory and a conserve of roses was a capital posset at bedtime. According to Varmex a conserve of rosemary and sage is very beneficial to students, as it "doth greatly delight the brain." All our common vegetables were at first regarded as medicine rather than foods.
This idea has not entirely disappeared, for it is considered a valuable quality in a medicine to be purely vegetable.

It is an old saying that "continued dropping will wash away a stone," but it is often forgotten that to make it a true one the dropping must be in the same spot. In other words, to win success you must not only be capable of long sustained effort, but you must exert it steadily in one direction.

THE SLAVE'S STORY.

It is About a Rebellion that Ended in First Failure.

That wise old slave, Esop, tells how the jaws and arms refused to supply and to grind food for the stomach which, they said, was a lazy thing living on its neighbors. Of course the rebellious members suffered and grew weak. As what we call science did not exist in Esop's day, it isn't likely that even he understood the full force of this fable.

We understand to-day the supreme importance of treating the stomach well, for the consequences of indigestion extend from the brain to the toes. Because of bad digestion there are so many skinny, pale, bloodless men and women in the world. Nothing will fatten and strengthen them unless they eat a food that will pass from the stomach into the blood without digestion. Paskola is such a pre-digested food.

"It gives me great pleasure," says Dr. G. W.
Babcock, of Chelsea, Mass., "to speak in the highest terms of your delightful preparation, Paskola. I have lately prescribed it for one of my lady patients, and I am greatly surprised at its wonderful power as a flesh producer. The young lady has been out of health and losing flesh. She began taking Paskola as directed. Her weight was 108 pounds. She has taken four bottles and now weighs 160 pounds, and is looking much improved. She says she feels like a new creature. This change has been brought about by Paskola." Another physician's testimony.

Oswego, N. Y., May 21, 1894.
Gentlemen:—The bottle of Paskola received a week ago to day and I immediately commenced the use of it. In connection with Poland water. I am feeling very much better and have increased 15 pounds. During the eight days use of Paskola, no eruptions or gas, in fact, seeming perfect digestion. If this condition continues, I shall be able to eat Paskola and will prescribe it when indicated to my patients.

Sincerely yours, E. M. MANWARREN, M. D.

tive will be mailed upon application to viewed the days of "powder and patch." Over

Common Sense and Food.

The doctors, in truth, have accumulated a great stock of knowledge as to food. They know what ought to be eaten and drunk. They know what ought to be refused, and they know, within the limits fixed by climate and labor, what are the beneficial quantities to be consumed, but they have entirely failed to make their knowledge permeate the world. The educated have only glimmering ideas as to what their children should eat. Half of them, till a few years ago, had a sort of horror of sugar, one of the most nourishing of all substances—and the uneducated have positively no ideas on the subject. They just eat and give their children what they can get. It may be said that this is inevitable, because the majority in all countries are too poor to do anything else, but is that true?

We are not pretending to be experts, but if we understand what professionals say much of the best food produced in the world is also the cheapest. Oatmeal, for example, is very much better than wheat bread and infinitely better than rye bread, and it is cheaper than either.
Hardly anything in the world is as nourishing as lentils, which might be sold much cheaper than bread, and eaten, too, with dripping, an invaluable combination. Millet, on which the big races of India grow so tall and strong, might, if there were a demand for it in Europe, be far cheaper than wheat, and so might "corn flour," on which Kentuckians, the strongest race in America, are bred, though that requires mixtures with a less nitrogenous diet.—London Spectator.

estate of James Whitney late of Craftsbury, said Dist., deceased, presents his administration account for examination and allowance, and makes application for a decree of discharge and partition of the estate of said deceased.

Whereupon it is ordered by said Court, that said account and said application be referred to a session thereof, to be held at Probate office in said Newport on the 1 day of Sept., A. D. 1894, for hearing and decision thereon: And it is further ordered that notice hereof be given in all personal notices, by publication of the same three weeks successively in the ORLEANS CO. MON-ITOR, a newspaper published at Barton, previous to said time appointed for hearing, that it may appear at said time and place, and, if cause, if any they may have, why said account should not be allowed, and such decree made.
